

Have you been to PIQE yet?

Southwest can't fly you there, but you're still welcome to come!

Better yet, PIQE is coming to the Roseville Joint Union High School district.

PIQE: It's pronounced pee-kay, and stands for "Parent Institute for Quality Education," but does that tell the story? Not in the least.

PIQE is a series of classes for parents that focus on how parents can help their children get into and succeed in college. It is designed to help everyone understand the education system in the United States and learn how to make sure its working for your students.

Many students have the talent and work habits that will get them into college and prepare them for lots of exciting jobs in the world beyond high school. Yet some aren't even making it in, much less finishing.

PIQE is designed by parents for parents. It originated out a series of meetings of parents with concerned individuals who wanted to see students do better in schools. The results are a parent course for how to work with the school system in order to improve student achievement. Over 400,000 parents have graduated from PIQE's 9 week parent involvement classes. The course starts on September 16th at Kaseberg Elementary School.

The Roseville Adult School is sponsoring the course as one of their regular lineup of classes. This is the course description.:

Parent Institute for Parents of Middle School and High School Students

The Parent Institute for Quality Education (PIQE) began in 1987 to offer assistance to parents of middle and high school aged children to help create a home learning environment, navigate the school system, collaborate with teachers/counselors/principals, and encourage college attendance. Since that time, over 400,000 parents have graduated from PIQE's 9 week parent involvement classes. Roseville Adult School staff will be facilitators of the program for parents of middle and high school students. Child care is provided. Parents who attend 4 sessions will be recognized at a graduation ceremony on November 12th.
